APPENDIX 7 – John Garner’s Carnegie Hero Award citation. (Note: His address is not given as Well House, but as it was War-time he was possibly in lodgings.)

John Garner (50), Stoker, 36 Chester Street, Rugby, on 29th April 1918, rescued a man (55) on the occasion of an explosion in a factory in Rugby.

John Garner (50), Stoker, 36 Chester Street, Rugby, on 29th April 1918, rescued a man (55) on the occasion of an explosion which occurred in the boiler house of the British Thomson-Houston Company’ Works at Rugby. The man was lying on a projected beam, but Garner was unable to reach him. He stood by, however, although the roof was threatening to fall, and waited until the beam canted and the man fell to the ground without further hurt. Garner had been previously awarded the Edward Medal by H.M. the King. He was awarded an Honorary certificate by the Trust.
